The goal of opening this new route between London City and Antwerp is to allow both business and leisure travellers to connect two major European cities in an hour's flight. Located in the north of Belgium, Antwerp is home to some superb museums, art galleries and many places to visit. But the city of Antwerp, known as the "diamond capital", is not only a historical and architectural centre: it is also a vibrant city and a major entertainment centre. Festivals and events are not uncommon.

Luxair's new route enables fast and convenient travel between Flanders' largest city and central London. The quick turnaround times at both airports and the excellent on-time performance are a great asset for both business and leisure travellers.

Anne Doyere, London City Airport's Director of Aviation said: "Reconnecting London to Europe's regions has been a post pandemic priority of ours, and we are delighted to be able to grow our partnership with Luxair by once again offering the only direct flight from the United Kingdom to Antwerp."

Eric Dumas, Antwerp Airport's CEO said: "The relaunch of the London City route fits perfectly into the strategy of Antwerp Airport. We want to offer both tourists and business travellers a tailored flight program. Reconnecting our airport with London City was a first important step in this. The connection to London is also an iconic route for the airport. Our airport has had a fast connection to and from the UK's capital for over 25 years. We are particularly pleased to achieve this objective with Luxair, an operator recognised in Europe for the quality of its services. This partnership was the best possible option for us, based on trust, quality of service and sustainability."

Gilles Feith, Luxair CEO said: "The opening of this new route from London City to Antwerp is a new venture for Luxair and an opportunity, once again, to pursue new opportunities. This new service is part of the innovation process undertaken by Luxair since the Covid-19 period. All our teams are working to constantly offer new services and products to our customers".
