Florence, the regional capital of Tuscany, is one of the most popular tourist destinations in Italy. It is acknowledged by UNESCO as a World Heritage Site, and stepping onto its historic cobbles it is easy to see why. Cradled between the surrounding hills, the city hosts some of the most famous works of art on the planet and the whole of the city centre is packed with stunning palaces, churches and monuments. The surrounding countryside is well-known for its rolling hills and its wine, particularly the Chianti area between Siena and Florence.

THE CITY

Boris Stroujko/Shutterstock.com

Florentia—literally "florid city"—was the name given by the Romans to this settlement founded in the I century AD along the Arno river, at the foot of Fiesole, an Etruscan city whose ruins are visible on the hill which dominates the city. The flowering of Florence in art, culture and international trade began in the 13th century and reached its peak in the 15th century under the reign of the Medici family, who ruled over the city for more than three centuries.

Everywhere you turn in Florence, you find extraordinary works of art and architecture, which attract almost 8 million tourists every year—from the Palazzo Vecchio to the world-famous Uffizi Gallery to the Cathedral with its magnificent dome and the tower designed by Giotto. Along the river Arno the Ponte Vecchio, with its jewellery shops is a must for all those who pass through the city, as well as the splendid Boboli gardens across the river.

Florence is also an international wine and gastronomic centre, Chianti is its most famous local product together with the celebrated Fiorentina steak on the bone.

DO & SEE

Maridav/Shutterstock.com

Visit Florence during spring is an obvious option, it is one of the best times of the year to visit due to warmer temperatures and all the beautiful flowers that are in bloom. In Florence there is so much to see and experience outdoor that a pleasant weather is the ideal, and alternate this with a good Italian ice cream can make your holiday unbeatable. In addition, the century city of Florence attracts millions of tourists each year, and it has been ranked as one of the world's most visited destination by Euromonitor International.

Cattedrale Santa Maria del Fiore

Florence's main church stands on the city with its magnificent Renaissance dome, designed by Brunelleschi. The cathedral was built on the ruins of the 7th century church of Santa Reparata. On its right side you can admire Giotto's Bell Tower, whereas the Baptistery of San Giovanni stands opposite the cathedral entrance. This remarkable historic landmark can be considered a summary of the entire city, as point of convergence of the greatest artists of the glorious Italian Renaissance period.

Paolo Gallo/Shutterstock.com

Florentine cuisine is known throughout the country for its combinations of fresh ingredients proceeding from its extended countryside. As in any other city of Italy, there are some local specialties that you cannot absolutely miss, like the ribollita (a sort of minestrone), pappa al pomodoro (tomato soup) and the famous bistecca fiorentina (Florentine t-bone steak). Tuscanian cuisine also has delicious starters, including crostini and bruschetta, toasted bread with various kind of toppings. Lastly, be sure not to miss cantucci with vin santo when you long for something sweet!

I' Trippaio di Firenze

If you want to experience the rustic taste of Florence, you must try lampredotto. It is a cured meat made by beef stomach, its taste is strong and does not leave space for grey zones: love it or hate it. This very typical product is usually eaten in big sandwiches sold in the street by trucks or wagon called "trippai". To try the most characteristic street food of Tuscany, visit Marco's truck "I' Trippaio", located in Via Gioberti.

CAFÉS

Mikhail Starodubov/Shutterstock.com

In the bustling Florence, there is wide array of cafés to sit down and relax, and if you have a sweet-tooth this city will not leave you disappointed. Many of the national Italian sweet specialties was born in Florence, it is even claimed that the modern gelato, as we know it today, was invented by a Florentine architect called Bernardo Buontalenti who worked for the Medici family. So even today if you ask for 'crema Fiorentina' (with milk, honey, egg yolk and citrus) the creation of Buontalenti, you will actually get ice cream made with his original recipe.

Eating ice cream is not only a favorite Italian pastime, but also drinking true Italian espresso while having a conversation with friends and family. So to escape the heat of the sun, just pop in to a café and enjoy some Italian desserts accompanied with a coffee.

Gilli

With an old world charm, Gilli is a historical café boasting Murano lamps, a frescoed ceiling and a beautiful arch. Pick delicious pastries or chocolates, which are so visually displayed and head to the spacious terrace that overlooks Piazza della Repubblica to people watch. If you want to experience an elegant breakfast with a stunning view, this is the ideal place. Keep in mind; it is a bit pricy, but definitely worth going once at least.
