Djerba, the largest island of North Africa, is situated southeast of Tunisia on the Gulf of Gabes, and is ringed by miles of sandy beaches and luxury hotels. With its ideal temperate climate, this is another very popular Tunisian destination. The many resort hotels provide anything you need for lazy days of sunbathing, plus a wide range of activities like thalassotherapy or water sports.

THE CITY

GorillaAttack/Shutterstock.com

Djerba is first and foremost known for its exceptional beaches, landscape and hotels, as well as its shooting location for the Tatioune's Mos Eisley exterior scenes in the famous Star Wars movie. The main tourist zone is situated on the east side, along Sidi Mahrez and Seguia beaches (around Midoun).

Touring the island is affordable. Wherever you go, you'll never be more than thirty minutes from your hotel, and you will be surprised how splendid Djerba is in its diversity. The main centre is the city of Houmt Souk, with its beautiful lively markets and souks, and traditional hotels with vault rooms – the "funduqs." Most of the hotels have been built around courtyards and are very atmospheric. The rest of the island is a series of villages and small places, often ignored by tourists, yet authentic and picturesque – such as Guellala which houses a huge pottery and ceramic production centre.

You'll be amazed by the atypical mosques, some are very old and built like fortresses, and the traditional architecture of the "menzels," farms made up of square whitewashed houses.

DO & SEE

SHOPPING

Souk means market in Arabic, and you should definitely visit one of them in Houmt Souk, which is the island's capital. Everything between heaven and earth is sold here. Goods from tools to raw meat are common sights.

The market is one of the few places where you see the female population. It is only men that are visible at the cafés and around the smaller villages.

The villages have local craftsmen, these include pottery and ceramics, carpets, baskets and leather goods to name but a few. The richness of olive wood is shown to good effect in the carved bowls, kitchen utensils and even in jewellery items.

Houmt Souk Bazar

Visit the Houmt Souk Bazar to get a taste of a true oriental bazaar. Goods on sale here range from handcrafted items to traditional clothing, spices, fresh produce and more. Haggling is part of the experience.

Public Transport

The best way to get anywhere in Djerba is by taxi. They are cheap and readily available in all main beach resorts, everywhere and at all times of the day or night.

Once you find a taxi driver you like, ask for his phone number and he will be happy to come pick you up and give you a ride. If you're a group, another good option is to use shared taxis, which go to a fixed destination. They leave only when they're full. If you need a booking back to the airport, it's also good to ask your hotel.

If you have time, an original way to explore Djerba is by bicycle or small motorbike. Ask your hotel for more details about rentals.
